

THE WORLD OF WHISKEY

5th Edition

WHISKY 101

Here we cover the whisky making process, whisky styles, suggested consumption methods, flavours and frequently asked questions.

SCOTCH WHISKY

- 11

The Highlands

Covering 75% of the mainland – this is Scotland’s largest whisky region. As a rule of thumb, the Highlands region produces full bodied whiskies and boasts an array of styles from rich and textured to elegant and floral.
- 28

Speyside

Part of the Scottish Highlands, Speyside has the greatest number of distilleries of any of the whisky producing areas of Scotland. Speyside whiskies are generally light and grassy or rich and sweet.
- 34

The Islands

Classified as part of the Highland region, excluding Islay, whiskies produced on the islands around the perimeter of the Scottish mainland are extremely varied; however, can often be distinguished from other whisky regions by having a smokier flavour with peaty undertones.
- 40

Islay

One of the southernmost islands located off the west coast of Scotland and one of the five whisky distilling localities and regions in Scotland whose identity is protected by law. Whisky distillation is the island’s second largest employer after agriculture. Islay whiskies often have a smoky character derived from peat.
- The Lowlands

Affectionately referred to as ‘The Lowland Ladies’, owing to the light and floral style of the region’s whisky. Surprisingly, there is more distillation in the Lowlands than any other Scottish region; however, its days as a significant single malt player are consigned to history. This is the home of the blend - due to the large quantities of grain whisky produced there.
- 44

Blends

Roughly nine out of ten bottles of Scotch sold around the world are blends. They are a mix of grain and single malt whiskies. Full of diverse flavour profiles, these whiskies can range from your favourite baseline Scotch that you mix with ginger ale or coke, to a blended malt or a complex aged blended Scotch.

IRISH WHISKEY

The Irish may have been the first to distil whiskey and for a brief period in the 19th century, Irish whiskey reigned supreme over its Scottish rival. Today, the Irish boom is back with some of the world’s finest whiskeys being produced there and new distilleries popping up all over the country. Irish whiskies are light, floral and exceptionally smooth.

AMERICAN WHISKEY

Bourbon and American whiskey’s roots go back to the late 1700s when British, Irish and Scottish settlers started making whiskey briefly in Virginia, before the industry settled in Kentucky. American whiskeys are distilled from a fermented mash of cereal grain and water. They are categorised as having toastiness, spice and vanilla sweetness, due to the predominant ageing in new charred American oak.

JAPANESE WHISKY

Less than a century old and with less than a dozen distilleries, Japanese whisky has moved fast to develop its own unique style and has been met with growing acclaim in the West in recent years. From light and precise to smoky and fat, its malts and blends offer a world of flavour and variety.

WHISKY LIQUEURS

Always very popular and have been around nearly as long as whisky itself. Often synonymous with honey, cinnamon and spice.

WHISKY COCKTAILS

Try these delicious cocktails at home, or ask for them by name at your local bar.

GREEN GINGER WINE

Synonymous with great cocktails, Green Ginger Wine is a must for any good| Whisky cabinet.

WHISKY 101

THE WHISKY MAKING PROCESS

1

Preparation

Various grains are ground and cooked. Barley is malted, a process of soaking the barley and spreading it for about three weeks, allowing it to sprout, before drying and heating it.

2

Mashing

The cooked grain and /or malted barley are added to warm water, which converts into a liquid known as mash.

3

Fermenting

The mash is added to a fermentation tank, along with yeast. The yeast converts the starch to sugar and then to alcohol. After three or four days, the resulting liquid is about 10% ABV and is known as distiller's beer, or wash.

4

Distilling

The wash is heated to the point where the alcohol turns to vapour, but the water remains liquid. The alcohol is then collected in a second container. This process is repeated to produce 'high wine' or 'new whisky.'

5

Ageing

Water is added to the high wine, which is aged in wooden barrels, usually made from white oak. Here the whisky ages for at least three or four years but most are aged up to ten or more years.

6

Bottling

The resulting whisky is stored in glass bottles, which do not react with the whisky's flavour.

WHISKY VS WHISKEY

The Scots spell it 'whisky' whilst the Irish and Americans add the 'e'. It is believed the Irish added the 'e' to differentiate themselves from the Scots, as they viewed their whiskey as superior. The 'e' was taken to the United States by Irish immigrants in the 1700s and has been used ever since.

SCOTCH WHISKY STYLES

SINGLE MALT

Single malt whisky is made at one distillery, using only malted barley and pot still distillation. Single malts are like fine wine, each is very unique and tells a story of a place and a time. Single malt Scotch must be aged for a minimum of three years in oak casks and this model is often used internationally with countries like New Zealand, Australia, Japan and Ireland also producing fine single malts.

GRAIN

Grain whisky refers to any whisky made from grain that isn't malted barley, such as those made using maize (corn), wheat or rye. Grain whiskies are distilled in a column still, generally making them lighter in style. This is how American whiskeys and Bourbons are usually made.

BLENDED

A blended Scotch whisky is a mix of malt and grain whisky and is the perfect entry point to the world of whisky. By law, blended Scotch whisky has to be matured in oak for at least three years.

HOW TO DRINK WHISKY

NEAT

Pure, undiluted and unadulterated, the way the whisky/whiskey is presented from the distillery. True purists always taste their whisky neat first and assess the spirit, before potentially adding water to open and soften the alcoholic content.

WATER

Adding a few drops of water allows the whisky to open up. Use room temperature mineral water. This reduces the alcohol strength on your palate and can bring out further flavours and aromas.

ON THE ROCKS

Be wary of adding too much ice as this will dilute your whisky, reducing the flavour, aroma and intensity far beyond just a few drops. Ensure ice cubes are made with good quality water and are even in size.

MIXED DRINKS

Primarily blended whiskies are used here. These are whiskies used in your whisky and dry, whisky and soda and also cocktails such as the Whisky Sour or Old Fashioned.

COMMONLY ASKED QUESTIONS

What is the difference between a blended and single malt?

A blend is the product of at least two, but usually many, distilleries using different grains and barley distillates. A single malt is a product from only one distillery, using only malted barley.

What is peat and how does it flavour Scotch whisky?

Peat is a semi-hard decomposed earthen substance commonly used like wood or coal to fuel fires. It gives off a lot of smoke and therefore when used to fire the kilns to dry the barley, it smokes the grain in the process.

What gives Scotch whisky its distinctive flavour and aroma?

The natural elements of water, peat, grain, yeast, distillation and maturation. The Scottish climate is extremely important, particularly when the whisky is maturing. The cooler climate allows the spirit to slowly extract the complex flavour notes from the wood.

Why do whiskies produced in different distilleries vary in flavour?

Key factors include the grain used and its peating (smoking) levels, the type of yeast, the size and time of fermentation and the size and shape of the stills. Probably most importantly: the cask quality, type and time the spirit is aged. Ageing conditions also have an effect, such as how the casks are stacked, the weather and distance from the sea.

How many distilleries are there in Scotland?

There are approximately 100 malt distilleries and seven grain distilleries currently producing spirit; however, the number working can vary from year to year.

Can Scotch whisky be made only in Scotland?

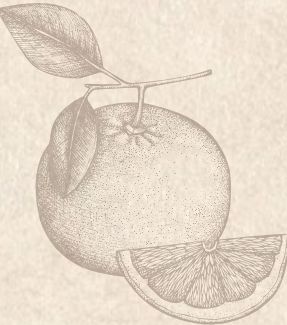

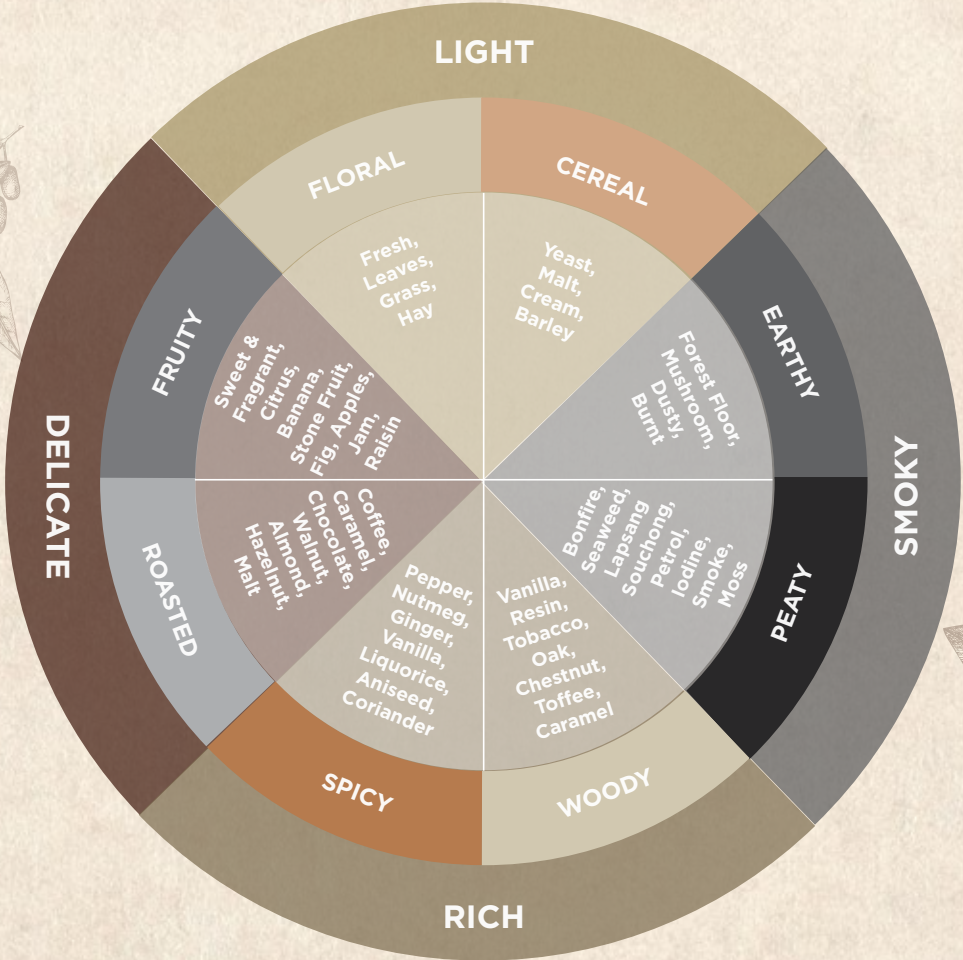

Yes. This is widely recognised by law, throughout the world. Thus, whisky may be described as Scotch whisky only if it has been completely distilled and matured in Scotland for a minimum of three years.

WHAT GIVES WHISKY ITS FLAVOUR?

Maturation has the most significant impact on the flavour of whisky. Water, fermentation, distillation and type of grain also have an impact. It is important to note whisky only ages in wood. Once it is bottled, it does not age any further.

The two most common types of casks used are American oak (Quercus Alba) Bourbon barrels 250L and Spanish oak (Quercus Robus) Sherry butts 500L. American oak brings the vanilla and sweet oak character (thanks to the charring process in American whiskey) whereas Spanish oak brings dry spice and sweet fruit characters thanks to the previous 30+ years that the casks have contained Sherry.

WHAT'S YOUR FLAVOUR TYPE?

SCOTCH WHISKY

All Scotch whisky must be made from grain and aged in oak barrels for at least three years and finally bottled in Scotland. Any age statement on a bottle of Scotch whisky, expressed in numerical form, must reflect the age of the youngest whisky used to produce that product.

SCOTTISH WHISKY REGIONS

THE HIGHLANDS

Fruity, Rich and Aromatic, Spicy
Known as one of the most scenic regions in Scotland, the land of rugged peaks and heather covered moorland is geographically the largest of the whisky producing regions. Includes distilleries: The Dalmore, GlenDronach, GlenGlassaugh, Glenmorangie, Dalwhinnie, Tullibardine and more.

SPEYSIDE

Herbal, Floral, Rich Fruit, Sweet
Has the largest number of distilleries, which include: Balvenie, BenRiach, Glenfarclas, Glenfiddich, The Glenlivet, The Macallan, Tamnavulin and more. Over half of Scotland's malt whisky distilleries can be found within this one region. Speyside - the lush, fertile valley of the river Spey - is undoubtedly the heart of single malt whisky distilling in Scotland.

THE ISLANDS

Smoky, Peaty, Spicy, Bold, Intense

The Islands, an unrecognised sub-region, includes all of the whisky-producing islands (but excludes Islay): Arran, Jura, Mull, Orkney and Skye - with their distilleries: Arran, Isle of Jura, Tobermory, Highland Park, Scapa and Talisker. Rugged, windswept and barren, the island landscapes generally produce single malt whiskies with strong peaty, maritime aromas. The Islands' malts are unmistakably powerful, bursting with flavour, from the recognised smokiness apparent in almost all offerings, to the great balance between sweat and peat, found in the new Jura range.

ISLAY

Peat, Power, Smoke, Marine, Salt

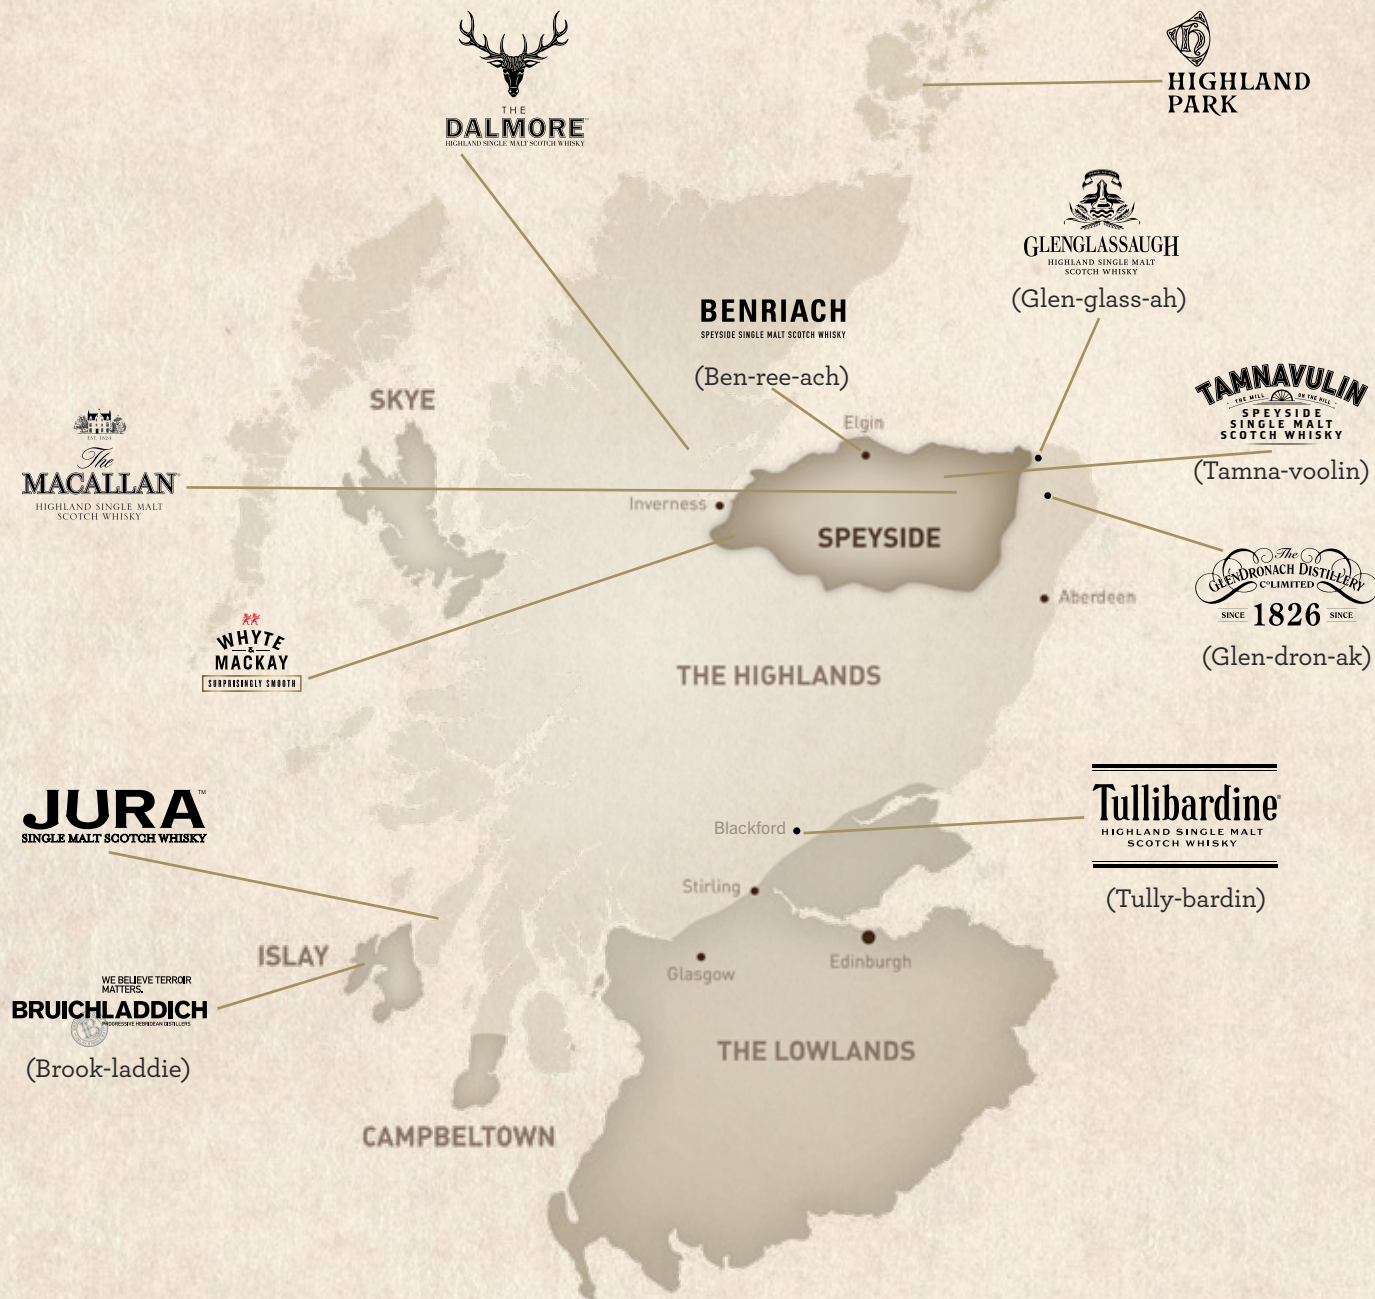

Bruichladdich, Lagavulin, Bowmore, Ardbeg, Laphroaig, Bunnahabhain, Kilchoman and Caol Ila. The majority of these whiskies rely on peat, a type of decayed vegetation that's found in wetlands, to give them unique aromas and flavours. While for some they are unappealing and medicine-like, for others they are the ultimate whisky experience. Up for a challenge? Bruichladdich's Octomore is the world's most heavily peated whisky.

THE LOWLANDS

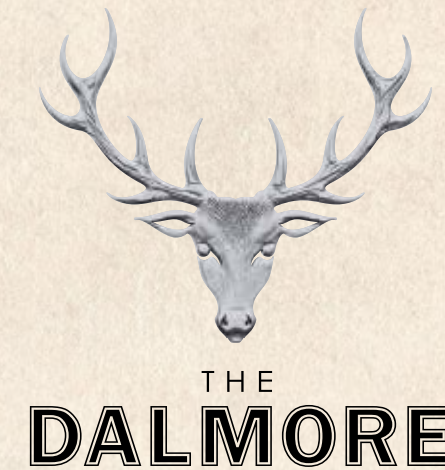

Light, Subtle, Dry

Now a handful of distilleries producing and selling whisky: Ailsa Bay, Auchentoshan, Bladnoch, Girvan and Glenkinchie. The terrain of the Lowlands is characterised by rolling fields which are ideally suited to growing grain for whisky. The softer landscape is mirrored in the region's single malts which tend to be lighter in both colour and body, than those of the Highlands. With little or no peat used in the drying of the malt, the whiskies distilled here are generally fresh and light, fragrant and floral with cereal flavourings.

SCOTTISH DISTILLERIES

HIGHLAND SINGLE MALT

Founded in 1839. In 1867 Alexander Matheson decided it was time to pass on the distillery to new owners - Andrew and Charles Mackenzie. They brought with them not only the iconic 12-pointed Royal Stag emblem, which has adorned every bottle of The Dalmore since, but also a formidable desire for success. Their passion for creating an even better whisky would fuel a whole new era for The Dalmore.

The distillery is located on the banks of the Cromarty Firth, in Alness – 30 kilometres north of Inverness. Water is sourced from the Alness river. Their whisky is impossible to replicate due to an unconventional belief in the use of different stills, of various sizes and shapes, and their maturation process - where many expressions of The Dalmore are matured in two precious wooden casks: American white oak former Bourbon casks and exclusive aged Sherry casks from Gonzalez Byass.

At The Dalmore they are proud to push boundaries. Their fearlessness is evident in every single expression - from the bold creativity of King Alexander III, to the adventurousness of The Constellation Collection, and the individuality of The Paterson Collection.

HIGHLAND SINGLE MALT

FRUITY ROASTED

THE DALMORE 12 Year Old

Matured for nine years in former Bourbon casks, the spirit is then divided – one half remains in the Bourbon barrels, while the other is transferred to exclusive 30 year old Gonzalez Byass Matusalem Oloroso Sherry butts before being reunited. Elegant, complex and rich on the palate with intense citrus and hints of sweet vanilla pod to finish.

FRUITY ROASTED

THE DALMORE 15 Year Old

Matured for 12 years in American white oak former Bourbon casks. The whisky is then split equally between three different Sherry woods (Amoroso, Apostles and Matusalem Oloroso) for a further three years. Finally married together in an upstanding Sherry butt. On the palate: mandarin, vanilla and ginger with Christmas spice and oak on the finish.

FRUITY WOODY

THE DALMORE 18 Year Old

An evolution of The Dalmore house style. Matured initially for 14 years in American white oak former Bourbon casks, then transferred to 30 year old Matusalem Oloroso Sherry butts for a further four years. On the palate: dark chocolate, candied citrus fruits and rich coffee.

HIGHLAND SINGLE MALT

FRUITY WOODY

THE DALMORE 25 Year Old

Matured initially in American white oak, then carefully divided into rare 25 year old sweet Palomino Fino Sherry butts and 1980 first fill Bourbon casks. These exceptional whiskies are then expertly married together in Bourbon barrels before being transferred, for the final time into Tawny Port pipes from Portugal, for a totally unrivalled finish. On the palate: orange peel, chocolate truffles and liquorice.

FRUITY ROASTED

THE DALMORE Cigar Malt Reserve

Aged in American white oak former Bourbon casks, 30 year old Matusalem Oloroso Sherry butts and Premier Cru Cabernet wine barriques. Designed to be enjoyed with a good Havana. Tropical fruits, banana, toffee and vanilla ice cream on the palate. Rounding off with orange zest, bergamot and crushed spices on the finish.

In 1826 the exuberant and extroverted James Allardice founded the GlenDronach Distillery and produced his 'Guid GlenDronach' single malt. In 1960 GlenDronach was bought by William Teacher & Sons. In 1968, GlenDronach was released as a single malt brand for the first time and the brand's reputation grew from strength to strength.

As was the case in 1826, The GlenDronach Distillery patiently matures its single malt whisky in superior quality Sherry casks. Their distilling methods may be old-fashioned; however, they prefer to look on them as handcrafted techniques created through nearly 200 years of tradition. From the germination of the barley to the flow of the purest middle cuts of distilled spirit, every step in the GlenDronach journey is taken with meticulous care and immaculate timing. They have a 'no compromise' approach when choosing their world-renowned Sherry casks. Over the years of extended maturation, these carefully seasoned casks help create the unique richly sherried style that GlenDronach is famous for.

From its hillside home in the Scottish Highlands, The GlenDronach Distillery creates some of the finest richly sherried single malts you will ever taste. Located near Forgue, by Huntly, Aberdeenshire. Water sourced from the Dronach Burn, the distillery holds two wash stills and two spirit stills and has a capacity of 1,300,000 litres per annum.

GLENDRONACH Peated

Unlike others in the GlenDronach core range - this whisky been distilled using peated malted barley and pays homage to the peat historically used to dry malted barley in the traditional floor maltings. Matured in Bourbon casks followed by a second period of maturation in the finest Oloroso and Pedro Ximenez Sherry casks. Bottled at 46% ABV. Subtle peat compliments oak spices, heather and honey.

Glenglassaugh Distillery was founded by James Moir in 1875. He quickly established a reputation for making a quality whisky and the company prospered. He ran the distillery with his two nephews until 1892, when Glenglassaugh was purchased by Highland Distillers. After being completely rebuilt in 1960, the distillery continued to produce whisky until 1986 when it was mothballed.

The Distillery is located at the east end of the beautiful Sandend Bay in Portsoy, Banffshire with water for the distillery sourced from the Glassaugh Spring. The distillery sat silent for over 20 years until it was purchased by a group of investors and started production again in 2008. In 2013, the BenRiach Distillery Company took over Glenglassaugh distillery with the intention to bring it back to life by giving it the investment, commitment and care it deserves.

Glenglassaugh is produced using the highest quality Scottish barley and traditional distilling methods, their key focus being on quality. While many distilleries have become highly automated, at Glenglassaugh the spirit is still handcrafted by a small, highly skilled team dedicated to creating the highest quality product. Only the finest casks are selected to slowly mature the precious spirit, in coastal warehouses, until it is ready.

The Macallan was one of the first distillers in Scotland to be legally licensed. Since then they have built a reputation as one of the world's leading single malt whiskies. The creation of The Macallan draws on the vital contributing influences of Spain, North America and Scotland - and of their respective natural raw materials, combined with traditional methods and craftsmanship.

Their reputation for the extraordinary is characterised by the exceptional oak casks. Sourced, crafted, toasted and seasoned under the watchful eye of The Macallan Master of Wood, the hand-picked casks are delivered to the demanding specifications of The Macallan Whisky Mastery Team. For every expression of The Macallan, the quality of the whisky is largely dependent on the quality of the oak casks it is matured in. With up to 80% of The Macallan's final character and flavour determined by cask quality.

All the whiskies take 100% of their colour from the wood in which they are matured. As wood is a natural product, each tree is different and in turn, imparts different flavours and colours to the whisky during maturation. The skill of the whisky makers ensures colour is as consistent as possible from bottling to bottling, through the management and selection of the casks which provide the spectrum of natural colour essential to The Macallan single malt.

Tullibardine®

HIGHLAND SINGLE MALT
SCOTCH WHISKY

The history of Tullibardine, as a location for brewing and distilling, is one of the oldest in Scotland, dating back to the 15th Century.

The water comes from the surrounding Ochil Hills, drawn from the Danny Burn. The clear water that runs through them will have taken 15 years to reach the Danny Burn.

As a family owned, independent distillery, they believe in doing things the traditional way, respecting heritage whilst ensuring a view to the future. This is why today they continue to handcraft their Highland Single Malt Scotch Whisky.

Tullibardine select first fill casks from the very best Bourbon distilleries to create their signature Tullibardine Sovereign. They then select barriques, hogsheads and former Sherry butts from the wine chateaus of Europe to further mature the rest of their core range. They only ever use the finest first fill casks to impart maximum flavour and colour.

With the addition of their bottling plant, they are now one of the few distilleries in Scotland to distill, mature and bottle all on site, giving Tullibardine complete control over the process.

BENRIACH

SPEYSIDE SINGLE MALT SCOTCH WHISKY

A Speyside single malt Scotch whisky as intriguing and extraordinary as Benriach could not have come to be without a unique whisky making heritage, dating from 1898, when founder John Duff built his distillery.

Ruggedly beautiful, Benriach stands on the site of the old Riach farm in north Speyside, drawing water from a mineral-rich aquifer, deep beneath the distillery. Thanks to a long-standing tradition of distilling three styles of whisky; classic unpeated, Highland peated and triple distilled, together with an eclectic selection of casks from around the world, our whisky makers are able to explore the full flavour possibilities of single malt, creating some of the richest, most multi-layered whiskies in Speyside.

This tradition continues today, under the guidance of Master Blender, Dr Rachel Barrie. Benriach is the story of a hidden Speyside gem; quietly revealing its treasures to be discovered and savoured.

Rich layering develops into an elegant honey smoke, enriched through multi-layered cask maturation.

SPEYSIDE SINGLE MALT

Tucked away on the edge of the River Livet, the skilled, time-served craftsmen and women at Tamnavulin Distillery have been creating their signature Speyside malt for over 50 years.

Their story began in 1966 with the opening of the distillery in the rural village of Tomnavoulin, Scotland. Although the doors were closed in 1995, they reopened in 2007 after a major distillery refurbishment. Since then, they have crafted exceptional single malt whisky with a true Speyside character; rich, smooth and mellow.

HIGHLAND PARK

SINGLE MALT SCOTCH WHISKY

Highland Park is made today, just as it was in 1798, using five keystones of production. No other distillery uses all five keystones, so no other whisky tastes like Highland Park. For whisky makers, location matters. It's about the impact of local climate on casks - and the impact of casks on maturation. Orkney is a remote cluster of some 70 islands, scattered in stormy waters off the extreme north coast of Scotland where the North Sea meets the Atlantic Ocean, so their distillery lies almost in the Arctic Circle, on roughly the same latitude as Anchorage, Alaska. Yet the climate is surprisingly temperate, reaching highs of only 16°C in summer and lows of around 2°C in winter, perfect for a long, cool and evenly paced maturation in the island warehouses.

Creating a balanced whisky takes time and skill, but creating the intense balance that makes Highland Park stand apart also takes harmonisation. They think it's fundamental but many distilleries deem it an extravagance. For every batch of Highland Park released, Gordon Motion, our Master Whisky Maker, selects and combines up to 150 casks, leaving the newly married spirit to rest for at least a month before being bottled. During that critical resting period, flavours from the different casks combine and harmonise, achieving an intense balance that's delivered through our whisky's fully rounded flavour and long, satisfying finish.

JURA™

SINGLE MALT SCOTCH WHISKY

Originally established in 1810, the Jura distillery was reborn in 1963 and with it a local community was revived.

It's the journey that makes Jura whisky a long way from ordinary. It begins on the Island's tallest mountains, the Paps of Jura. The wild mountains filter the water down to Market Loch below.

It takes time to make a whisky that tastes as rich and rounded as Jura Single Malt Whisky. They source the best barrels from around the world to mature their unique spirit.

Jura's iconic, seafaring bottles with their rounded edges were historically designed to withstand the roughest of journeys from their home to the furthestmost corners of the globe.

Initially Jura produced a smoky spirit; however the rebirth in 1963 forged a new path for the distillery which began crafting spirit with unpeated malt. Today, Jura embraces both to create a single malt with subtle smoke complimented and balanced by the sweetness of American oak former Bourbon casks and enhanced by wine casks from Europe.

Whyte & Mackay can trace its roots back to 1844 in Glasgow. The River Clyde is where their story started, an area better known for its shipbuilding. In fact, at that time, one in every five ships sailing the seas was built and launched there. So when James Whyte and Charles Mackay saw an opportunity to provide the hard working residents of Glasgow with an alternative to Cognac, their superior blended whisky, Whyte & Mackay was launched.

As the population of Glasgow grew with immigration from the Highlands, Ireland and Europe, so did the popularity of Whyte & Mackay. That popularity lives on today, as does the pride and passion of their two founding fathers - James Whyte and Charles Mackay - in every glass of their whisky.

Still based in Glasgow – producing consistently smooth and rich tasting whisky. Partly thanks to their triple maturation process and partly down to the abiding genius of their third generation master blender and those who came before him.

IRISH WHISKEY

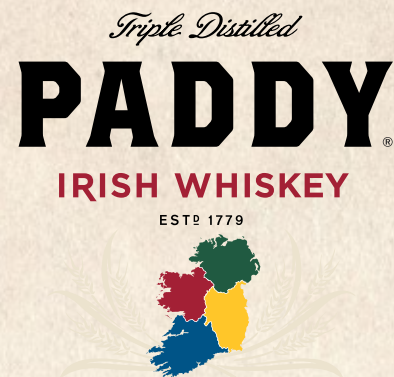

The word ‘whiskey’ is an Anglicisation of the first word in the Gaelic phrase; “uisce beatha” meaning ‘water of life’. Irish whiskey is distilled three times as opposed to Scotch which is primarily distilled twice. This extra distillation creates a smoother, lighter flavoured whiskey. In the 1890s Irish whiskey was the most popular in the world with over 37 distilleries in Dublin alone. After a decline, due to Prohibition, it has been one of the fastest growing spirits in the world year on year since 1990. The Teeling Distillery is the first new distillery to open in Dublin in over 125 years and won World’s Best Whiskey Visitor Attraction in 2016, one year after it opened, not to mention the countless array of medals received for their whiskies at the world’s most prestigious competitions.

IRISH DISTILLERIES

IRISH WHISKEY

Paddy Irish Whiskey was first produced by the Cork Distilleries Company (founded 1877) and originally named: ‘Cork Distillery Company Old Irish Whiskey’. In 1882, the company hired a young salesman - Paddy Flaherty. His sales techniques were so good that in 1912, the distillery officially renamed the whiskey ‘Paddy Irish Whiskey’.

Distilled at the New Midleton Distillery, with a production capacity of 64 million litres per annum, it is the largest in Ireland. Here, the likes of Jameson, Tullamore Dew, Powers and Redbreast are all produced alongside Paddy. Paddy is distilled three times from the finest quality grains and water, then matured in casks for up to seven years. It has a high malt content in its blend. Jim Murray coined it “one of the softest of all Ireland’s whiskeys”.

IRISH WHISKEY

Whiskey making and entrepreneurship has been in the Teeling genes since 1782, when Walter Teeling set up a small craft distillery on Marrowbone Lane. Right back in the heart of the Liberties district of Dublin city, Jack and Stephen Teeling, the latest generation of whiskey makers, set up the Teeling Whiskey Company in 2012. In 2015 they opened the Teeling Whiskey Distillery, the first new distillery in Dublin in over 125 years, and just a stone's throw from their ancestral distillery.

With one eye on the past, but looking to the future, Teeling are the new generation of Dublin distillers. They approach their craft with a respect for generations past but with the confidence to forge the next chapter of Irish and Dublin whiskey. Teeling uses its own well, taking water from the Camac river in the city.

The distillery is a fully functional pot still distillery producing up to 500,000 litres of spirit each year. With the opening of the distillery came the opportunity to fully control the entirety of production. They are able to truly innovate and are crafting unique whiskeys through mash bills, fermentation and distilling techniques. Bottled at a higher ABV than most, of at least 46%, the revival of Irish Whiskey is well and truly upon us.

BOURBON & AMERICAN WHISKEY

Bourbon and American whiskey's roots go back to the late 1700s, when westbound British, Irish and Scottish settlers started making whiskey in Kentucky. In 1964, the US Congress established federal regulations for producing the spirit. All American whiskeys are distilled from a fermented mash (mixture) of cereal grain and water without any colouring or flavouring additives. Unlike Scotch or Cognac, American whiskey must, by law, be aged in new, charred oak barrels and be no more than 160-proof (80% alcohol by volume). In order to be classified as 'straight' whiskey, it must be aged for at least two years and unblended. American whiskeys entail: rye, rye malt, malt, wheat, bourbon, corn, and Tennessee whiskey, which is a special classification of Bourbon. Bourbon must be made from a mash that is at least 51% corn. The rest of the mash is made up of rye, wheat and/or malted barley. While most Bourbon today is still made in Kentucky, it can legally be made anywhere in the United States. The spirit's beautiful amber colour comes from the wood that it's aged in for at least two years, while the alcohol by volume climbs to a minimum of 40% (80-proof) before bottling.

BOURBON

Produced using a mash of 51%-80% corn, and aged in new, charred white-oak barrels, Bourbons display the sweeter style associated with American whiskey.

WHEAT

Using a mash of at least 51% wheat, and aged in new, charred white-oak barrels; it's only the grain which differentiates wheat whiskey from Bourbon, resulting in a softer style.

RYE

Made from a mash of at least 51% rye and aged in new charred-oak barrels, these are spicier and fuller-bodied than Bourbons, making an excellent alternative to Bourbon in the classic Old Fashioned cocktail.

CORN

Must contain at least 80% corn in the mash-bill and aged in uncharred oak barrels, corn whiskey is the historical style of American whiskey – inexpensive, aged for a short time and intended for immediate consumption, these show off the spirit's natural character.

WHITE DOG

White Dog is the American term used for unaged whiskey, also known as 'moonshine' or 'white whiskey'. Bottled directly after distillation, usually with water added to reduce it to drinking strength, these show off the character of a distillery's spirit in its most natural form.

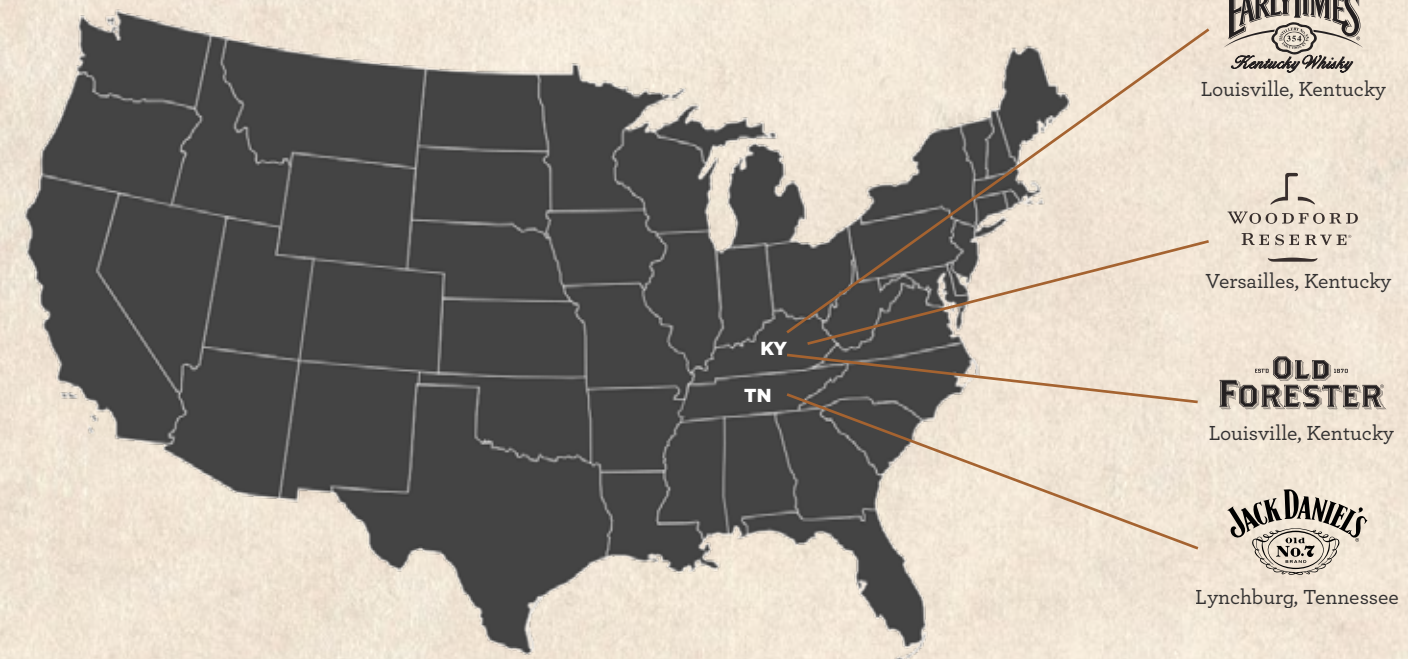

TENNESSEE

Made from a mash of at least 51% corn and aged in new charred-oak barrels, these differ from Bourbon in two ways: they must be made in the state of Tennessee, and generally use the Lincoln County Process, whereby the whiskey is filtered through maple charcoal before bottling. The prime example of this is Jack Daniel's, whose iconic No.7 bottling is world famous.

OTHER AMERICAN

Other styles of American whiskey include single malt, blended and flavour infusions, as well as those made by craft or micro-distilleries which do not fit into any of the above categories for various production reasons.

JACK DANIEL'S
Old No. 7
Lynchburg, Tennessee

Early Times came into being in 1860, at Early Times Station, Kentucky. Kentucky water is perfect for making whisky because it is naturally filtered through limestone springs which makes it rich in minerals that add flavour and help with fermentation.

Early Times began to prosper in 1920 when Prohibition began and Early Times was designated a ‘medicinal whisky’, making it exempt from the law.

The Brown - Forman Company acquired Early Times in 1923 and over the next 30 years made Early Times the best-selling whisky in the country. Today its smoothness is savoured in over 40 countries.

Early Times Kentucky Whiskey is the epitome of good, honest American whiskey at its best. Early Times’ proprietary formula and unique aging process create a smooth, flavourful, easy-to-drink whiskey. Because it is so mellow, it is easy to drink both neat and in mixed drinks.

Kentucky Whisky

Jack Daniel’s believed “Every day we make it, we’ll make it the best we can.” For Jack that meant mellowing his whiskey drop by drop through 10 feet of sugar maple charcoal. Seven generations later, they still mellow the whiskey just as Mr. Jack did.

The reason is simple – it imparts a distinctive smoothness folks have come to expect of Jack Daniel’s charcoal mellowing which makes Jack Daniel’s what it is – a Tennessee Whiskey and not a Bourbon. It refines the whiskey’s rich flavour even before it is fully matured in barrels of their own making.

It’s a painstaking process that demands extra attention and makes the whiskey a bit more costly to craft. But Mr. Jack wouldn’t have it any other way.

Jack Daniel’s is made from 80% corn, 12% barley and 8% rye . Using only No. 1 quality grade corn gives the mash an inviting sweetness. An ample amount of rye rounds out the sweetness with robust notes of pepper and spice. And just enough malt brings it all together with a creamy smoothness.

SOUTHERN COMFORT 100 Proof

From a secret, and very old, recipe that is the soundtrack to drink to the smoky bars and muted horns of the American South. Smooth and easy on its own, it mixes with just about anything. 100 Proof maintains the iconic flavour, but with the additional alcohol content which results in a unique, smooth taste with extra bite.

WOODFORD RESERVE®

Woodford Reserve isn't manufactured, it's crafted in small batches. This artisanal process creates a perfectly balanced Bourbon comprised of more than 200 detectable flavour notes - from bold grain and wood, to sweet aromatics, spice and fruit and floral notes which give Woodford Reserve its distinct taste with a crisp, clean finish.

Unlike Scotch, which uses grain as its primary ingredient, Bourbon uses corn. Woodford Reserve has a very high corn percentage of 72%, compared to the average Bourbon of 52%. The rest is then made up of rye (a high 18%) and malt (a low 10%) which form the basis of its compound flavour.

The Woodford Reserve Distillery is nestled amid the rolling hills and thoroughbred farms in Versailles, Kentucky. A National Historic Landmark, the present day Woodford Reserve Distillery sits on Kentucky's oldest distilling site, where Elijah Pepper began crafting whiskey in 1812. Today Chris Morris maintains the position of Head Master Distiller and as the second Master Distiller ever at Woodford Reserve, Chris knows the keys to making good whiskey and spends his days innovating and planning future releases such as the Master Collection series.

WOODFORD RESERVE

Bourbon Whiskey

The perfectly balanced taste of the Woodford Reserve Kentucky Straight Bourbon Whiskey is comprised of more than 200 detectable flavour notes, from bold grain and wood, to sweet aromatics, spice, and fruit & floral notes. It's silky smooth, almost creamy at first with a long, warm satisfying tail.

WOODY ROASTED

WOODFORD RESERVE

Double Oaked

An innovative approach to twice barreled Bourbon creates the rich and colourful flavour of Woodford Reserve Double Oaked. Uniquely matured in separate, charred oak barrels - the second barrel deeply toasted before a light charring. To taste it is a full-bodied mix of vanilla, dark caramel, hazelnut, apple, fruit and spices.

WOODY SPICY

WOODFORD RESERVE

Rye Whiskey

Made in the traditional style of Kentucky ryes, Woodford Reserve Kentucky Straight Rye Whiskey delivers bold flavours of pepper and tobacco with a long fruit and sweetly spiced finish. The Woodford Reserve rye mash bill contains 53% rye and is bottled at 45.2% ABV.

WOODFORD RESERVE

Malt Whiskey

Unlike a typical malt whiskey, this is 51% malt and aged in new charred oak barrels, making it the malt whiskey for bourbon drinkers. The result is richly flavorful and complex and amplifies the nutty characteristics found in the original Woodford Reserve. Using malt grain allows the wood to play a big role in the flavour.

Wheat Whiskey

Woodford Reserve Wheat is based on historical recipes but influenced by the iconic core Woodford Reserve Bourbon brand. With wheat as the dominant grain – at 52%, followed by malt (20%), corn (20%) and rye (8%). This uniquely crafted whiskey boasts fruit and floral flavors. Woodford Reserve Wheat whiskey completes the range.

JAPANESE WHISKY

Whisky production started in Japan in 1923 and is currently home to over ten operating single malt distilleries, many of which have opened in the last few years. The Japanese style is varied, with grain, single malts and blended whiskies all being produced there. From light and floral, through to heavily Sherry influenced, there are also peated expressions made with varying levels of smokyness. Overall, these whiskies are elegant and refined, and at times the use of native Mizunara White Japanese Oak imparts a unique and perfumed woody aroma and taste. In Japan, a blended whisky will generally only contain malt whisky from the distilleries owned by that same company.

JAPANESE WHISKY

MARS WHISKY

Sandwiched between Japan's soaring Southern Alps and the towering Central Alps, at just over 2,600 feet, Mars Shinshu is Japan's highest whisky distillery. The Hombo family have been distilling for more than a century and they added whisky to their repertoire in 1949. Back then the distillery was located in Kagoshima Prefecture on the southern most island of Kyushu. Until 1984, it was the southernmost whisky made in Japan, which ended with the Hombo clan moving the distillery to the idyllic alpine setting of Miyada village in southern Nagano Prefecture. They chose this site for its cool temps, which slowed maturation, and the plentiful, soft, granite filtered snowmelt fed aquifers.

Mr Kiichiro Iwai designed their original pot stills. He was a boss of Taketsuru (Nikka's founder), and he is one of only four Japanese listed in the Top 100 most influential people in the history of whisky in the world.

Mars is the third largest Japanese whisky maker after Suntory and Nikka. Their whiskies are elegant, smooth and very complex – designed to be paired with food.

Cosmo

Aged in a combination of former Sherry and Bourbon casks, Mars Cosmo is a blended malt featuring whisky from Japanese distillery Shinshu, as well as whiskies from undisclosed Scottish distilleries. The result is a tasty blend of sweet flavours such as honey, caramel and ripe fruits, subtly highlighted by some woody and smoky hints.

Komagatake

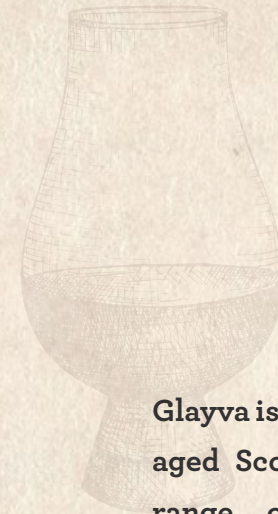

The 2014 distillation of malt whisky matured in new Bourbon and American white oak barrels, mixed with Sherry casks of malt aged for more than 20 years. It is a single malt whisky of soft and gorgeous scent with the flavour of ripe fruits from the long-aged malt in Sherry casks. Limited release.

WHISKY LIQUEURS

If you have a sweet tooth, whisky liqueurs could be the choice for you. Often made using honey and herbs, many recipes remain a secret.

SCOTTISH WHISKY LIQUEURS

GLAYVA

Glavya is created from an exotic fusion of the finest aged Scotch malt whiskies, a carefully selected range of spices, Mediterranean tangerines, cinnamon and honey. Because of all these different ingredients, Glavya has a very distinctive and pleasant taste. Surprisingly smooth and sweet, with a hint of cinnamon and spices, it really tastes like nothing else! This exotic whisky fusion has been awarded fourteen times at the International Wine and Spirit Competition, making it literally the best liqueur in the world.

GREEN GINGER WINE

Synonymous with great cocktails, Green Ginger Wine is a must for any good Whisky cabinet.

Cavalier Green Ginger Wine is a classic green ginger wine, produced by Josh Scott (of Allan Scott Family Winemakers fame) using premium Marlborough grapes co-fermented with zesty natural ginger. Brewed in Marlborough, the result is a truly delicious beverage - perfect drunk neat, over ice, or add your favourite mixer. And of course.....it is the essential component of the beloved “Whisky Mac”- a mix of Green Ginger Wine and a good blended whisky.

Josh has always been an “innovation guru”, well known for his role as winemaker in the family business, as well as a stint creating one of the New Zealand’s most successful craft beers. Josh is New Zealand’s first qualified Cicerone (basically a “beer sommelier.”) As the perfect combination of winemaker & craft brewer - who better to brew Cavalier Green Ginger Wine!

Cavalier Green Ginger Wine is forging a new path, making wine of a different kind.
